Department of Education Sciences

Description succinte

The Department of Education Sciences is animated by a diversity of people who share their knowledge and experience for the development of research, support of education and contribute to the life of the institution. These include faculty members and other stakeholders, administrative staff and students themselves.

Multidisciplinary by definition, the department uses approaches, methods and concepts of the humanities and social sciences fields (anthropology, economics, history, psychology, sociology, language sciences, information and communication sciences, political science, and philosophy).

Our department also offers many courses that help to prepare students for a variety of national exams and trades central to the field of educational sciences, as well as research, social work and human resources.
