Department of Breton and Celtic Studies

Description succinte

The department of Breton and Celtic prepares students for a variety of professions, particularly training and teaching. However, the organization of the curriculum makes it possible to acquire useful skills related to other professional fields like documentation, tourism or professions related to social areas.

The organization of courses in teaching units or modules also allows the student to build an individualized course and thus acquire skills useful for insertion in other professions like documentation, editing, communication, journalism, administration, tourism, services to companies and any profession requiring the knowledge of Breton.
