Transportation Beyond the City

Trips within the region can be undertaken using the Breizh Go network, which includes all regional transportation (coaches, TERs...), or the SNCF network. Thanks to the multi-network Korrigo card, it's easy to get away for a weekend or a holiday stay around Brittany.

Coaches

Breizh Go coaches connect users from the center of Rennes to various towns in the surrounding area on a daily basis. People under the age of 26 benefit from reduced prices across the network – you can travel across Brittany for less than 5 euros.

Coasts, beaches and more!

Situated in the extreme west of the European mainland, Brittany boasts over 2,730 km of coastline, i.e. 5% of the surface area of France.

The TER & SNCF Network

The TER train system is a regional network of trains with over 126 railway stations, making it easy to get to coastal areas of Brittany like Saint-Malo and the Mont-Saint-Michel in a short amount of towns.

Traveling outside of Brittany can be easily done by booking a TGV through the SNCF service, France's network of high-speed trains. From the Rennes train station, for example, you can access one of the many trains that go to Paris each day – just a 90-minute trip! The TGV also offers rail travel, French style, to more than 230 destinations in 15 countries. Book your tickets online and receive them by email and print them out, or just use the SNCF app on your smartphone or tablet, and off you go!
